TOBACCO GROWERS ARE ACTIVE.

Several Meetings Held Saturday in the District.

NO MEETING HERE.

Attorney Garner Hopeful of Government Assistance Against the Trusts.

The meeting called for last Saturday in this city by Organizer F. B. McCown, of the Society of Equity, was not held, though a good many farmers interested in the movement were on hand. Mr. McCown did not come in from his home 20 miles in the country. He was probably kept at home by illness.

Owensboro Takes Action.

Owensboro, Feb. 20.—Four hundred and fifty Daviess county farmers, largely members of the American Society of Equity, met at the court house here Saturday and launched on a firm foundation the plan to handle their own tobacco product by means of the warehouse system. Turpin & Wood, backed by Louisville capitalists, will make the necessary advance of $4 a hundred on tobacco, and prepare the weed for the market. These warehouses will be open to persons living in other counties, and not restricted in use to society members.

Garner Returns.

Clarksville, Tenn., Feb. 18.—The Hon. A. E. Garner, who was appointed special attorney by the President to investigate the alleged tobacco combine in the dark tobacco district, has returned from Washington, where he was called to confer with United States Attorney General Moody. He believes that the officials will go to the very bottom in the investigation of the operations of the alleged trust.

Henderson in Line.

Henderson, Ky., Feb. 18.—The farmers' organization of Henderson county at a big meeting today resolved to prize the pledged tobacco amounting in the aggregate to 2,400,000 pounds. It is now claimed that much more tobacco not now pledged will be prized. Something like $8,000,000 pounds is estimated to be unsold in this county.

Mrs. Bettie Yancey, wife of Mr. James G. Yancey, of near Barnes, died rather suddenly Sunday morning of heart disease. She had only been sick a short while. She was 42 years old and survived by a husband and four children—two sons and two daughters. She was a member of the Christian church and a most excellent woman.

Deceased was formerly Miss Littlefield. The remains were interred in the Dick Boyd burying ground, near Kelly, yesterday.

GRAND DUKE MET DEATH WITH A BOMB.

Uncle of the Czar Assassinated Under the Walls of Palace.

ASSASSIN IS ARRESTED.

Marked By the Terrorists After Suppression of Demonstration.

Moscow, Feb. 20.—Within the walls of the far-famed Kremlin Palace, and almost underneath the historical tower from which Ivan the Terrible watched the heads of his enemies falling beneath the axe in the famous red square, and within a stone's throw of the great bell of Moscow, Grand Duke Sergius, uncle and brother-in-law of Emperor Nicholas, and the chief of the reactionaries, met a terrible death shortly before 3 o'clock Friday.

The deed was committed by a single terrorist, who threw beneath the carriage of the Grand Duke a bomb charged with the same high power explosive which wrought Minister Von Plehve's death. The missile was packed with nails and fragments of iron, and its explosion tore the imperial victim's body to ghastly fragments which strewn the snow for yards around.

Every window in the great, lofty facade of the Palace of Justice was shattered, and bits of iron were imbedded deeply in the walls of the arsenal, a hundred yards away.

The assassin belongs to the noted "fighting group" of the socialist revolutionary party, which has removed other prominent officials, and long since passed sentence of death upon Grand Duke Sergius.

In a minute the carriage was in front of the Court of Justice, where the walls of the triangle approach, forming a narrow entrance to the Nikolsky gate. There a man clad in workman's attire stepped forward from the sidewalk and threw a bomb which he had concealed beneath his coat. A terrific explosion followed and a hail of iron pelted the grim stone walls of the arsenal and Courts of Justice. A thick cloud of smoke, snow and debris arose. When it had cleared away a ghastly sight was presented. On the snow lay fragments of the body of the Grand Duke, mingled with the wreck of the carriage. The Grand Duke's head had been torn from his body and reduced to a shapeless pulp and the trunk and limbs were frightfully mangled. A finger, bearing a rich seal ring, was found lying several yards away. The crimson tint and sickening smell of blood were everywhere. The coachman lay moaning with pain beside a deep hole in the pavement. The horses, dragging the front wheels of the carriage, had dashed off, maddened with pain, to sink dying before they reached the gate.

The sound of the explosion was heard throughout the city and even beyond the river. A crowd began to assemble and handled grim evidences of the tragedy, while they discussed the affairs in awe-struck voices. Police officials rapidly gathered, but before anything could be done toward collecting the scattered fragments of the body, Grand Duchess Elizabeth drove up in an open carriage. She had dropped her work at the headquarters of the Red Cross and sped to the scene of the crime without waiting to don her outer wraps.

She broke down entirely at the sight, and dropped to her knees, sobbing bitterly. After a few minutes she was led away. Then a stretcher was brought, and, covered with a plain soldier's cloak, the remains of Sergius were carried to the Choudeff Cloister, where officials and members of the Grand Duke's suite had assembled.

The assassin was thrown to the ground and stunned by the force of the explosion, but he quickly arose and ran toward the gate, attempting to escape. His haste and the blood streaming from his face where he had been wounded by fragments of the bomb, attracted the attention of a sergeant of police, who seized him before he could draw his revolver.

The man did not deny his crime, but smiled and gloried in its success. He expressed his satisfaction that he had been able to kill the Grand Duke without involving the latter's innocent wife. He avowed his membership in the social revolutionary organization, but refused to give his name, and at the jail his papers were found to be forged. He was armed with an automatic magazine pistol, of the same make as the weapon employed by Hohenthal, the assassin of Socialon Soininen, the Procurator General of Finland, at Helsingfors on Feb. 6. His injuries are not serious.

The Grand Duke's coachman, who was badly injured, was still alive at last accounts, it is thought will die.
